Amber Heard appears to be making a lot of noise after losing the bombshell defamation trial launched against her by ex-husband Johnny Depp.

A Virginia jury debated and determined that Heard defamed the “Pirates of the Caribbean” actor after penning an op-ed for the Washington Post in 2018 claiming she was a victim of abuse.

Though Heard did not identify Depp in the article, it was clear that it was about him because she had accused him of physical violence just days before filing for divorce and a restraining order against him.

Heard was ordered to pay Depp $10.35 million, but her attorneys argued she couldn’t because she didn’t have the money.

But it appears that she now has a plan, and her next step is apparently to write a book about her deal.

According to an individual who talked to OK magazine, Heard already believes her Hollywood career is done.

trial, such as job loss, Warner Bros. has replaced Depp with Mads Mikkelsen in the newest “Fantastic Beasts” movie, which was released this year.

Margot Robbie succeeded him in the sixth film of the “Pirates of the Caribbean” franchise.

It’s unknown what Johnny Depp’s next film will be, but with his newest and rumored release of his music album, the emphasis will undoubtedly be on him. ■
